

Oregon Grape is a cider base infused with the berries of Oregon's state flower, Berberis aquifolium, otherwise known as Oregon Grape. Related to the holly plants, and not grapes, these native plants are important ecologically and culturally to the people of the Pacific Northwest. Our berries come from a small patch of tall Oregon Grape we planted a few years prior to the licensing of the cidery for this explicit purpose, an Oregon Grape hard cider. The apple varieties in the cider base will vary among batches, but are still fermented slowly employing French wine making techniques of Sur Lie (extended aging on lees), and Bâtonnage (stirring the lees), with Oregon Grape providing a tart complement to the dry cider base. We hope you begin to notice this great native plant around more, as it is a common landscape choice in many public places, and it inspires you to support native plant restoration and conservation in the region.
